

The Senufo Cultural Center, a shelter for all

Paralyzed by endless school strikes, Mali is struggling to save the 2018-2019 academic year. The Senufo Center does not seek to know who is wrong or who is right. As much as possible, against waves and tides, the Center continues to be interested in the young generation that pays the biggest price today and who will pay even more in the future. Indeed, if we lose interest in this very important layer of the population, how can we dare talk of safeguarding and promoting indigenous culture?

Yes, even with our meagre means, the so tiny rooms and limited spaces at our disposal; even under the burning sun and bad weather, we do not give up before this national misadventure. Thanks to the many institutions that, from near and far, continue to make the Senufo Cultural Center a shelter for all without distinction. Long live the Malian school.
