

Actors of peace through conflict management

More than ever, our human society needs to make every effort to ensure a better world where there is:

- mutual understanding between people without any distinction,
- respect for the difference desired by the Creator by creating us unique, endowed with a particular and good complexion that is found nowhere else,
- harmony between the human beings and nature on which we constantly (but often unconscious) depend.

It is with this in mind that the Senufo Cultural Center organizes various socio-educational and cultural workshops. Similarly, the Center published a book entitled "Les Koredugaw en milieu senufo" (Jesters / clowns in the senufo society) by Sanogo T.A et al., éditions Jamana, 2015, Collection Wu Nire. The korèdugaw (jesters / clowns) are an initiatory society in the traditional senufo society that has a regulatory role based on a philosophy and moral foundations promoting cohesion between both members of society and between human society and nature. That the Korèdugaw are often at the front scene of several social activities such as baptisms, marriages, deaths, war/conflict areas ...

Therefore, we will offer imagery sessions (in pictures / drawings) taken from our day-to-day life events that demonstrate how (even without being part of the Korèdugaw), we can be actors of the unity initially intended by God. That is being peace makers in our society, builders of bridges between people and not among the ones who separate them. Being sufficiently familiar life events, even without understanding the language, one can easily grasp the idea behind the scene. Thus, for the moment, as much as possible, we shall endeavour to deliver these pictorial sessions in three languages : English, Bambara and Senufo. Your comments, remarks and mostly feedbacks are always welcome.
